The Snow Dragon by Vivian French

The Land of Ice

Beginning

The world was split into two halves. The northern half was as cold as ice. The land was covered in a blanket of glittery snow and ice. Snow covered everything the houses, the trees and the hills. It was freezing cold and a chill went through your body. When snow fell, it fell quickly and silently. The land was very peaceful, and no one ever argued.

The Land of Fire

The Southern half was burning hot and ruled by ferocious fire dragons with skies turning into burning crimson. It rains with swirling smoke and ashes.
