

What to do today

IMPORTANT Parent or Carer – Read this page with your child and check that you are happy with what they have to do and any weblinks or use of internet.

1. Read an Ananse Story

- Read Why Pig Has a Short Snout.
- How does it compare to the other Ananse story you read? What is similar? What is different? Which do you prefer? Why?

2. Make a summary of the story

- Use words and pictures to make a summary of the story on Story Summary.
- Try using your summary to help you to tell the story to somebody else.

3. Learn about conjunctions for time, place and cause.

- Use the PowerPoint 2 or Revision Card to learn about using conjunctions for time, place and cause.
- Complete Conjunctions for Time, Place and Cause 1 and 2.

Share your answers with a grown-up. They can check the answers to part 1 at the end of this pack and you can read them your sentences for part 2 to check that they make sense.

Try these Fun-Time Extras

- Can you make an illustration for either of the stories about Ananse that you have read?
- Can you design an Ananse character? How would you show his characteristics in your design?
- Can you write sentences about yourself, using conjunctions to join clauses?

Why Pig Has a Short Snout

It used to be, not so very long ago, that the pig had a trunk as long as the elephant's. And so proud was he of his great trunk! With it he could suck up water for his very own shower, and he could water the plants in his herb garden. He could snort and blow a scary tune, and he could curl his trunk around and tie it in knots.

In those days, Pig was also a money lender. His success was due to the fact that no one ever made off with his money. With his trunk he would sniff and find the culprit and drag him from his hiding place. Pig was very proud of his useful trunk.

Now, Ananse borrowed some money from Pig to pay for his son's marriage. And because Ananse liked to keep up appearances, he had borrowed a lot to show his worth.

A month passed by, and it was time to pay back Pig. But Ananse, it seemed, had forgotten his debt. "Here I come," said Pig, "with my long trunk to seek and find."

But when he got to Ananse's house, Ananse pleaded for another week.

"You had better have my money," threatened Pig. "Or else you shall have the thrashing of your life." Then he waved his trunk in the air and went off to collect from someone else.

The next week Pig returned. "My money, Ananse. I want my money.

"Now you have startled me," said Ananse, looking down a long bamboo pole. "See, I have dropped your money down my bamboo pole. Now I have to think how to get it out!"

"I'll get it," replied Pig. And so Pig reached deep into the hollow bamboo pole. Pig strained and pushed. When he realized his trunk could go no farther, he tried to pull it out. But he couldn't. He was stuck. He moved his head this way and that, but he was stuck. He wiggled and rolled and banged his head, but he was stuck.

Ananse had gone to hide in his web, and none of the other creatures was willing to help. Finally, with one big shake of Pig's head, the bamboo pole fell off, alas with his trunk. And it never grew back. As for Ananse, he did not pay back Pig, and Pig never bothered him again.

Adapted from The Pot of Wisdom by Adowa Badoe

Story Summary

|  |  |  |  |
|--|--|--|--|
|  |  |  |  |
|  |  |  |  |